Ring Shank Manufacturing Methods:

Die-Struck Shanks

The process of die striking requires either a flat or circular steel mold to be made of a specific shank profile; fabricated metal is then forced into this mold forming the contours of the shank profile.

- Struck and rolled shanks are struck flat and formed into their round circular form using several shaping and annealing processes.
- Struck coined shanks are formed in a mold that mirrors the fully-round profile of the shank; the metal is forced into this mold to make a round shank and from that, is trimmed to form the final shank profile.
- Metal structures in struck shanks exhibit tight surface grains that have been compacted by sheer force, arising from striking operations and are easily polished to a bright surface finish.

Milled Shanks

A shank profile is cut using a CNC machine from the appropriate thickness of extruded tubing. In this reduction method, automated CNC machines are loaded with heavy tubing appropriate to the thickness of the shank; cutters mill the excess metal away to form the desired shank profile.

- Milled shanks maintain the dense grain structure of the extruded tubing through this process. This method offers precision profiles, and metal surfaces polish exceptionally well.
- There are limits to the milling process; it cannot be performed on some shank profiles that have high shoulders or undercuts.

MTO=Made to order in 3 working days.

Suggested retail prices based on $1,900 gold; $1,700 platinum; $800 palladium and $40 sterling silver.

Installation Instructions for ForeverFit™, Self-Adjusting Shank

ForeverFit self-adjusting shank is about as easy to install as “half-shanking” any ring. Simply measure your customer’s ring size normally (comfortable slide over the knuckle allows for a little future growth).

Solder is not used in the original construction of the ForeverFit. The stainless steel spring “floats” under the cradle and may be removed during the soldering process, to prevent loss of tension.

Note: The ForeverFit components are a precision fit, so do not attempt to alter the ring after assembly. Encourage your customer to come in frequently for an “Ultrasonic Cleaning!”

Later, complete disassembly of the ForeverFit is easy. The .021 pins used in the assembly are a press fit in place. They may be pressed out with a mini arbor press or simply reverse a #77 or smaller drill bit in the chuck of a small drill press. Leave a ¼” or less extending, and presto—you have an arbor press.

- After sizing customer's ring, cut off bottom. CUT HERE
- Cut the ForeverFit shank to line up with the customer's shank. CUT HERE
- Take customer's ring top and align it with the bottom of the ForeverFit shank. DO NOT HAMMER OR BEND INWARD IN THESE AREAS.
- Once the customer's top matches the bottom of the ForeverFit shank, solder together. SOLDER HERE DO NOT APPLY DIRECT HEAT TO SPRING. PROTECT WITH HEAT SINK MATERIAL OR REMOVE.

Installing Adjusto-Shank®

Adjusto-Shank sliding ring shank expands or contracts with a squeeze. Eliminates all knuckle-fit problems. Joining the Adjusto-Shank

- Slide the Adjusto-Shank into the closed position.
- Hold against the ring shank to be applied and mark where to cut the shank above the joint.
- Cut shank and solder Adjusto-Shank to customer's ring.
- Shape the Adjusto-Shank to same width and thickness as the applied shank.
- Lightly polish soldered area to finish.

Installing the Superfit® Shank

- Determine the correct finger size for where the customer will wear the ring.
- Select installation technique as shown in figure 1 or 2.
- Place Superfit and original ring on mandrel to determine where to cut; mark both rings.
- Adjust Superfit and top of original ring to match correct finger size.
- Apply solder resist to hinge and catch areas, fire-coat all components.
- Solder hinged side, adjust if necessary; and then solder catch side.
- Quench in mineral oil to retain spring temper.
- If necessary, adjust tension as shown in figure 3. Increase tension if catch is sluggish, decrease if catch is too difficult to close.
- When polishing, avoid altering latch and hinge surfaces to maintain precision operation.
- Clean ultrasonically then apply a drop of oil to working parts.

To Put On:

- Use a pen to press "dimple" which will open the catch.
- Lift the top to open completely. Do not pull at the latch.
- Place ring over wearing position, click shut.
- Remove by pressing "dimple" with pen.

Installing the Finger Fit® Adjustable Shank

The Finger Fit opens an additional three sizes from the closed position. For example, when sized to a 7, it will open to accommodate a size 10 knuckle.

1. Determine the correct finger size for where the customer will wear the ring.
2. Cut customer ring at 6:00 o'clock position; shape to correct CLOSED ring size.
3. Cut Finger Fit at 12:00 o'clock position, shape to correct CLOSED ring size.
4. Match ring and shank on mandrel EXACTLY. As far from hinge as practical, mark ring and shank. Cut excess from both; together they should equal the CLOSED ring size.
5. Solder together, then emery and polish to match and blend.
6. Polish and clean the newly assembled ring.

Helpful Hints:

- * Use Tix Anti-Flux, #54-4024 to prevent solder flow into hinge area.
- * Avoid filing and hammering in the hinge areas to assure precision and durability.
- * For replacement wire, request item number SH42X.

To determine the right size of pearl (round) to fit a multi-strand bar clasp

1. Measure the pearl or bead diameter with a millimeter gauge

2. Measure clasp jump rings from center of one ring to the other—The distance between ring should be at least equal to or slightly greater than the pearl diameter, so that pearls do not abrade one another.

MAGNETIC CLASPS

Magic Power® Clasps have strong magnets which can be easily fastened and unfastened at the neck or wrist. These clasps hold fast until the two halves are rotated toward each other. Then, they easily release.

14kt 1-pc	$426.91	$577.96	$586.31

Handling the Magnetic Clasp

1. The magnets are glued into the two halves of the clasps. Do not use any heat nor leave the magnetic clasp in a cold environment.
2. The magnet is strong, but we do not recommend using it either for heavy stone necklaces or necklaces with South Sea pearls.
3. If, for whatever reason, the magnet is lost, it can be replaced by ordering series #23657.
4. The magnet is rarely a problem with pacemakers. If you have a pacemaker, please contact your doctor before handling or wearing.

GOLD CASTING GRAIN

Stuller karat gold casting grains are produced using only high purity raw materials. All metals used in Stuller alloys are certified to exceed 0.999+ in metallic purity. Each melt is analyzed by traditional fire assay and x-ray fluorescence techniques to ensure quality and consistency. Our karat gold casting alloys contain special additives that enhance casting characteristics, provide for less rejects and finishing work, and increase reusability factors. Grain for rolling is formulated specifically for sheet production and wire drawing applications.

SILVER CASTING GRAIN

Sterling Silver

melting point: 1640°F

flow point: 1750°F

Our original standard sterling silver casting grain.

Contains 92.5% silver and 7.5% copper.

Continuum Sterling Silver

melting point: 1680°F

flow point: 1732°F

A platinum group sterling, is by far the hardest sterling silver ever developed by Stuller. It has over 95% precious metal content. Continuum Sterling has a much higher as-cast hardness that allows setting of high-quality stones in sterling silver jewelry, and a much tighter grain size allowing a better more lasting finish, superior oxidizing and tarnish resistance benefits.

Sterling 935***

melting point: 1640°F

flow point: 1750°F

Contains 93.5% silver instead of the traditional 92.5% in most other sterling silver casting grains. The additional silver content provides a white luster similar to pure silver, while maintaining the hardness and durability of standard sterling silver. Used by major manufacturers to enhance their silver product lines.

Sterling 935 Deox***

melting point: 1435°F

flow point: 1610°F

Formulated to eliminate fire-scale and reduce porosity, while maintaining the hardness and durability of standard sterling silver. 93.5% silver content provides a richer silver luster as compared with standard sterling. Several times more tarnish resistant than standard sterling. May be reused with 50% fresh mix. Recommended casting temperature: 1800-1825°F

Fine Silver

melting point: 1761°F

flow point: 1860°F

.9995 + pure silver.

Sterium Plus

melting point: 1585°F

flow point: 1655°F

A superior deoxidized sterling silver designed to achieve maximum hardness and eliminate fire scale and porosity. Developed to have a hardness approximately equal to standard sterling silver. Ultra white color. An all purpose application. Alloy extremely user friendly as it is easy to work with for casting as well as fabrication for rolling. Traditional sterling silver available upon request. Additional lead times may apply. Stuller now offers all manufactured silver mill product in Sterium Plus.

Super Sterling

melting point: 1555°F

flow point: 1645°F

Deoxidized sterling silver that is rather resistant to tarnishing. This alloy is softer than standard sterling silver and casts very well. Designed to reduce fire scale and porosity. Best used for investment jewelry casting.

Minimum order is 10 pennyweights.

LEAD TIMES: 10kt Yellow, 14kt yellow, 14kt white, 18kt yellow and sterling silver will ship same day in most cases. Back orders will ship the following day. All other metal qualities are MTO (made to order) and will ship within three working days in most cases. Same day shipping subject to order specifications, special request and inventory on hand at time of order. Additional charges and lead times may apply to odd quantities.

MASTER ALLOY

Stuller master alloys are produced with only the purest metals available. Our master alloys for casting grain are formulated to produce brighter castings, with reduced porosity and uniform grain structure and are non-oxidizing. Master alloys for rolling are specifically formulated for rolling and wire drawing applications. Casting and rolling alloys do not contain gold.

BASE METALS FOR CASTING

54-4409

Alloy 99 Replenisher

Designed to deoxidize used gold for casting.
2 Troy ounce bag $10.95

10kt Scrap: Add 5 dwt #99 and 3.57 dwt of fine gold for each 100 dwt of 10kt scrap being melted.

14kt Scrap: Add 4 dwt #99 and 5.60 dwt of fine gold for each 100 dwt of 14kt scrap being melted.

18kt Scrap: Add 2 dwt #99 and 6.00 dwt of fine gold for each 100 dwt of 18kt scrap being melted.

For white gold, the above ratios can be applied, but use will be limited to once or twice due to the yellowing of the white color.

54-8100

Herculoy Casting Cubes

An economical bronze alloy containing 5% zinc. The low zinc content releases little fumes or smoke when melted. Color approximates 14Kt Yellow gold. Readily accepts nickel, gold, or rhodium plating, and solders easily with silver solder. Sold by the pound. Melting point 1850°F. Metal to wax ratio 8:1.
$19.95

54-8102

Art Brass Casting Cubes

An economical brass alloy containing 30% zinc. The low casting temperature and bright yellow color lend itself to jewelry casting. Polishes bright and electroplates/solders beautifully. Overheating can create excessive fumes and smoke. Sold by the pound. Melting point 1700°F. Metal to wax ratio 9:1.
$19.95

54-8104

J S Brass Casting Grain

A high-quality brass casting alloy containing the same deoxidizing agents used in our karat gold casting grain. Castings are bright and firescale free. Color is very close to 14KT Yellow. Highly recommended for sculpture. Sold by the pound. Melting point 1950°F. Metal to wax ratio 9:1.
$20.75

Silicon Bronze Casting Grain

Our silicon bronze's casting properties are superior to most other bronzes. Cast with few fumes or smoke and can readily be electroplated. Color is darker than our brass and Herculoy formulas. Highly recommended for sculpture. Sold by the pound. Melting point 1850°F. Metal to wax ratio 9:1.
$19.95

54-8108

White Bronze Casting Grain

A nickel-free white bronze alloy with a low casting temperature of 1,650°F. Accepts rhodium plating after a nickel or gold pre-plate. Can be brazed and polished. Sold by the pound. Melting point 1850°F. Metal to wax ratio 8:1.
$19.95

Base metals for casting shipping weight is 1 lb.

SPEEDWIRE: LASER WIRE & DISPENSERS

Ever dreamed of the day when you'd feed laser wire into a weld with ease? Today, with the Speedwire dispenser system, you can do it. The Speedwire system features a specially designed dispenser with a finger-controlled feed. Use this one-handed operation to get in as close as 2mm from the weld. How's that for improving your accuracy?

Each reloadable dispenser is able to hold a ten-foot wire spool in its clear, sealed compartment. Monitor how much you've used while keeping it neat and clean. The wire feeds through a stainless steel guide for stability. No need to keep repositioning the wire to get it in just the right spot. The dispensers are color-coded so you can tell one metal from another. This is definitely a tool you won't want to live without.

METALS CLUB

GET THE BEST PRICE POSSIBLE ON YOUR METALS PURCHASES AND START SAVING TODAY.

How does the Metals Club work?

You tell us how much gold, platinum, or silver products you purchase per month (including grain, sheet, wire, stock, solder, tubing, etc.). Stuller will use this information to set up your Club Membership Level. You will receive your quantity pricing on each and every order, even the smaller ones. This allows you to purchase small quantities as needed, yet receive your total quantity price. Also, as long as you meet the quota for one metal quality, you get the quantity pricing for gold, platinum, and silver products! After a period of time (usually six months), Stuller will review your metals purchases, advise on how closely you have met your original purchasing estimates, and determine if a change in your Club Level would benefit you.

What are my Metals Club level options from which I can choose?

There are eight levels in which to choose from

- 20 dwt
- 50 dwt
- 100 dwt
- 200 dwt
- 500 dwt
- 1000 dwt
- 1500 dwt
- 2000 dwt

PLATINUM SHEET SOLDER

PLATINUM, PLUMB SOLDER SHEET

CADIUM-FREE

Plumb platinum solders provide a superior white color as compared to traditional solders for platinum work. Because of the higher platinum content (90% to 95%), the color is nearly a perfect match with most platinum alloys. Polishing problems are also reduced as the hardness of these solders closely matches the surrounding platinum alloy.

CHANGING THE KARAT OF A QUANTITY OF GOLD

To Raise Karat: Find raising factor at intersection of "Karat on Hand" and "Karat Wanted". Multiply the weight of your karat gold on hand by the raising factor. This gives you the weight of fine gold you must add to raise to karat wanted.

RAISING FACTORS

karat wanted	9½kt	10kt	13½kt	14kt	17½kt	18kt

0kt	.655172	.714284	1.285714	1.399998	2.692299	3.00

To Reduce Karat: Find reducing factor at intersection of "Karat on Hand" and "Karat Wanted". Multiply the weight of your karat gold on hand by the reducing factor. This gives you the weight of alloy gold you must add to reduce to karat wanted.

LOWERING OR RAISING THE KARAT OF A QUANTITY OF GOLD

TO LOWER THE KARAT, USE THIS FORMULA:

A = The weight of alloy needed to lower the karat
 W = The weight of the gold
 K = Karat of the gold present
 N = The needed karat

$$A = \frac{W (K-N)}{N} \quad \text{or} \quad A = (K - N) \times W \div N = A$$

Example: We want to change 7 dwts. of 18kt to 14kt.

$$A = \frac{7 (18-14)}{14} = \frac{7(4)}{14} = \frac{28}{14} = 2 \quad \text{or} \quad 18 - 14 \times 7 \div 14 = 2$$

(This formula works better for a calculator.)

TO RAISE THE KARAT, USE THIS FORMULA:

Amount of 24kt gold needed equals (final karat less beginning karat) times beginning weight divided by (24 less final karat)

Example 1: How much 24kt gold must be added to 15 grams of 12kt gold to raise it to 14kt gold?
 Amount of 24kt gold needed equals  $\frac{(14 - 12) \times 15}{24 - 14} = 3$  grams

Example 2: How much gold is required to raise 10 grams of 14kt gold to 18kt gold?
 Amount of fine gold needed equals  $\frac{(18 - 14) \times 10}{24 - 18} = 6.6$  grams

TROY WEIGHT

Used in weighing the precious metals.

- 24 grains = 1 pennyweight (DWT)
- 20 dwt = 1 ounce Troy
- 12 ounces = 1 pound Troy
- 5,760 grains = 1 pound Troy
- 480 grains = 1 ounce Troy

- 1 kilogram = 2.68 pounds
- 1 kilogram = 32.15 ounce Troy
- 1 kilogram = 2.2046 lbs. Avoir
- 1 kilogram = 35.2740 ounce Avoir
- 1 kilogram = 15,432 grains

Troy oz. = 1.0972 ounce Avoir

CARAT WEIGHT

Used in weighing the precious and semi-precious stones. (The term "Karat" refers to the quality of purity in gold.)

- 1 carat = 31/16 grains Troy
- 1 carat = .007 oz. Avoir
- 1 carat = 1/5 gram

The carat is further divided into points for simple measurement:

- 1 carat = 100 points
- 1/2 carat = 50 points
- 1/4 carat = 25 points
- 1/8 carat = 12 1/2 points

AVOIRDUPOIS WEIGHT

Used in weighing base metals.

- 16 drams (or drachms) = 1 oz. Avoir
- 16 ounces = 1 pound Avoir
- 16 ounces = 7,000 grams
- 28 pounds = 1 quarter English
- 4 quarters = 1 hundredweight (cwt.)
- 20 hundredweight = 1 ton Avoir

- 1 pound Avoir = 14.5833 Troy oz.
- 1 ounce Avoir = 0.914 Troy oz.
- 1 pound Avoir = 7,000 grains
- 1 ounce Avoir = 437.5 grains
- 1 pound Avoir = .4359 kilo.

GRAM WEIGHT

- 1 gram = 15.43 grains Troy
- 1.55 grams = 1 pennyweight (DWT)
- 31.104 grams = 1 ounce Troy
- 28.35 grams = 1 ounce Avoir

- 1 grain = 0.0648 grams
- 1 grain = 64.80 milligrams
- 1 milligram = .015432 grams
- 1 gram = .035274 Avoir oz.
- 1 gram = .032151 Troy oz.

DETERMINING STRAND LENGTH/CLASP SIZES

HOW MANY BEADS FOR KNOTTED?

Counts were calculated by stringing with #5 silk cord. Numbers may vary depending on knot tightness. For other strand lengths, multiply the 1" number by the intended length of the finished strand. Remember that finishing knots and the clasp will add approximately 1" to the total length.

bead	1"	7"	16"	18"	24"
3mm	6.3	44.1	100.8	113.4	151.20
4mm	5.1	35.7	81.6	91.8	122.4
5mm	4.2	29.4	67.2	75.6	100.8
6mm	4.2	29	67	76	100
7mm	3.5	25	56	63	84
8mm	3.2	22	51	57	76
10mm	2.5	18	40	45	61
12mm	2.1	15	34	38	50

HOW MANY BEADS FOR UNKNOTTED?

Use this guide to know how many beads you'll need to complete a uniform unknotted bead strand.

Please note: Knots add 1" to 3" or more to your finished strand, depending on its length and the size of the beads.

bead	1"	7"	16"	18"	24"
3mm	8.4	59	134	151	201
4mm	6.3	44	100	113	151
5mm	5.1	36	82	92	123
6mm	4.2	29	67	76	100
7mm	3.5	25	56	63	84
8mm	3.2	22	51	57	76
10mm	2.5	18	40	45	61
12mm	2.1	15	34	38	50

For a 32" strand, double the number of beads in the 16" column.

For a 36" strand, double the number of beads in the 18" column.

WORKING WITH WIRE AND SIZING STOCK

Selecting a metal, pouring ingots, cold working, annealing and stress relieving procedures are identical to the fabricated sheet methods described.

SPECIAL TIPS AND POINTERS

- To straighten our stocks and wire: first, anneal and quench to soften. Then, fasten one end and pull on the opposite end with tongs or draw bench until you feel a slight movement. Release pressure, and the piece should be straight.
- To help prevent pits when sizing, you need an absolute flush fit at the joint which should also be as clean as possible. Paste solder is not designed for sizing work and should not be used.
- You can request tempers other than what we stock when you place your order. Allow three extra working days for us to ship.

REMINDER – Stress-relieving product will greatly reduce the likelihood of stress-corrosion cracking.

SEAMLESS TUBING

Seamless tubing is available in a variety of stock sizes in round, oval and square. Tubing is used to manufacture large lightweight jewelry.

- Drawing down to a smaller outside diameter can be done simply by pointing the end, waxing or oiling the outside of the tube and pulling through the desired dies on your draw plate. The wall thickness will increase slightly with each reduction.
- Too great a reduction in a single pass may collapse the tubing so use care.
- The amount of work and annealing procedures are identical to fabricated sheet.
- Arboring of round tubing is done as follows:
  1. Anneal tubing.
  2. Insert a lubricated wire no greater than two-thirds the inside diameter of tubing.
  3. Gently pull the ends of the wire, so the tube wraps around the mandrel (Let the wire do the work.)
  4. Remove the wire insert.
  5. The larger the tube diameter is, the larger the arbor must be. If multiple draws are required, the arbor will become difficult to remove from the tube stock. Some scheduling is required.
    1. Anneal tubing.
    2. Insert lubricated wire no greater than two-thirds the inside diameter of tubing.
    3. Gently pull the ends of the wire, so the tube wraps around the mandrel (Let the wire do the work).
    4. Between each draw the tube needs to be loosened on the arbor. Making a light pass through one set of the grooves on a square rod mill does this.
    5. Prior to final tube size, loosen the tube and remove arbor. Draw to final size.

HEAT TREATING

Heat treatments are powerful methods for changing the structure of a material and altering its properties. There are several reasons why annealing is done. They are as follows:

1. To soften metal after cold working operations, so that further cold work can be done.
2. To decrease segregation in age-hardenable gold alloys, so that a maximum hardness will be achieved during the age-hardening process.
3. To eliminate concentration gradients that occur as a result of solidification events during the casting processes.
4. To strengthen and harden alloys that respond to “age-hardening” process steps. Heat treating to remove the effects of cold work is probably the most common treatment given to precious metals. This section will review annealing and age-hardening heat treatments in separate sections. Hopefully, the reader will obtain a deeper understanding of some processing techniques that can be used to great advantage.

ANNEALING COLD WORKED STRUCTURES

The cold worked state is a condition of higher internal energy than the undeformed metal. Although the cold worked structure is mechanically stable, it is not thermodynamically stable. With increasing temperature the cold worked state becomes more and more unstable and eventually the metal softens and reverts to a stress-free condition.

Annealing is a process, which eliminates the stresses created during mechanical working or deformation of an alloy, so that the material can be restored to maximum softness. In the metals industry, this involves heating a metal to an elevated temperature for a controlled length of time, followed by natural or forced cooling back to room temperature. Annealing is very important commercially, because it restores ductility to a metal that has been severely cold worked. Therefore, by interposing annealing operations after severe deformation, it is possible to deform metal to a great extent.

It is important to realize both time, temperature and cooling rate are important variables in controlling the outcome of an annealing process. In general, annealing should be completed in a time that is measured in minutes, not hours. Stuller, Inc., we received a distress call from a person who destroyed a white gold piece by annealing it overnight in an attempt to make it “really soft.” Unfortunately, the gold alloy was severely damaged by trying to achieve the impossible. Metals can be softened to a certain point and no further, regardless of how long they are exposed to elevated temperatures.

The Gold Alloy Data in the Appendix contains many graphs for 14kt, 18kt and 22kt yellow gold alloys that describe how hardness, strength and ductility change with annealing conditions. To create these graphs, samples were annealed for a period of 30 minutes at increasing temperatures. This graphical information is worth some study. For example, the graphs demonstrate how hardness, strength and ductility change drastically after 30 minutes of exposure to temperatures around 500°C - 600°C. The graphs indicate that a 30-minute anneal at 800°C results in hardness values that are only slightly less than those achieved by annealing at 500°C - 600°C for the same length of time.

This extra decrease in hardness is a result of grain growth. Large grains are undesirable in material that is cold formed because they will create “orange peel” texture, which is very difficult to polish and finish. Thus it is best to choose an optimum temperature for annealing where recrystallization occurs readily and grain growth occurs slowly.

THE METALLURGY OF ANNEALING

As stated earlier, the driving force for annealing is the elimination of the stored energy that accumulates in the piece during cold working (plastic deformation). About 5% of the energy used for plastic deformation is stored in the material while the remainder is converted into heat. In a practical sense, material can not be rolled indefinitely. Annealing restores the ductility and reduces the strength a material had before cold working.

A cold-worked metal structure can pass through three stages during an annealing process. These three stages of annealing are (1) recovery, (2) recrystallization and (3) grain growth. The most desirable metal properties are generally created in stage two, the recrystallization step. The grain-growth stage should generally be avoided, because large grains are generally undesirable in a high-quality, metallurgical product.

STRESS-CORROSION CRACKING AND ITS EFFECT ON KARAT GOLD ALLOYS

You are behind your sales counter when one of your repeat customers enters your store. One look at her immediately warns you that something is wrong. After a short greeting, the customer produces a piece of jewelry that has missing prong tips, and, even worse, the diamond or gemstone is also missing. After a few questions and a quick visual examination, it becomes obvious that this is not the typical fracture, as seen when a prong has been torn off. Closer inspection of the fracture surface reveals a grainy appearance that is very porous. The odd appearance of the fracture surface and the infrequency of this type of failure lead you to believe that the problem is “bad metal” or “bad casting.” Was the problem really due to defective metal or casting or is there another explanation and solution? The correct answer may surprise even the most skilled and experienced craftsman.

It is not surprising to initially blame the material as the cause of fracture but with the use of high powered magnification and literature that is not readily available to the craftsman the real cause can be found. The photos below illustrate several products with a “mysterious” failure that you may have encountered during your career. The prong tips broke off with little or no indication of onset of failure. As a matter of fact, they all appear to have fractured in a brittle manner showing very little ductility.

All of the examples in the above photos illustrate that none of the failed prongs exhibit evidence of ductility around the broken prong tip or on the fracture surface. Features like “orange peel” texture or a dimpled fracture surface are always present when a ductile alloy has been broken by bending, twisting or pulling too many times. Most karat gold alloys typically used to produce jewelry with are usually quite ductile. You are able to bend each of the prongs to correctly seat the stone with no obvious complications.

This lack of ductility becomes very clear when the fracture surface of the broken prong tips are viewed under high magnifications using a scanning electron microscope (SEM). The black and white photos seen above are SEM images taken at lower magnifications, typically 20X to 100X. At higher magnifications, the fracture surfaces appear as shown in the SEM images on the following page.

The “rock candy” appearances of grains in these images are merely facets of grain boundaries. Each grain has separated from its neighbors along the grain boundaries it once shared with them. This is known as intergranular fracture, which is typically associated with the brittle mode of failure. The brittle fracture surface often appears specular or shiny (when it is not covered with debris) to the unaided eye. At low magnification, the intergranular fracture surface may appear porous. At higher magnification, it becomes apparent that the pockets are created by clusters of crystals being removed at multiple levels. This intergranular fracture is clear evidence of how the initially ductile gold alloys used in jewelry applications have become brittle at the notched areas of the prong tip. So why did the prong fail in a brittle manner?

Brittle mode failure of a ductile gold alloy is not typical. The three most common causes of brittle mode failure are stress corrosion, hot tearing and contamination of the alloy.

Hot tearing typically results in intergranular failure and occurs when stress is applied to the material at elevated temperatures near its melting point. These fractures usually exhibit oxidation on the fracture surface and a “waxy” appearance on the crystal facets. Examples of hot tearing would be fractures occurring during soldering operations and fractures found on castings due to fast quenching of investment molds. If these type fractures are present in a prong, they would usually become obvious when the prong was manipulated during stone setting.

Gross contamination of gold alloys can also lead to intergranular fracture. Lead is a well- documented contaminant in gold alloys, and levels as low as 0.01% can result in brittle failure. Alloys with gross contamination would almost never make it through stressful operations such as rolling, drawing or stone setting without suffering severe cracking.

Stress corrosion cracking (SCC) is a brittle mode failure that is well documented and has been extensively studied in all families of different engineering alloys. For example, certain types of stainless steel are known to be susceptible to SCC when exposed to chlorine or chlorine containing compounds. Copper alloys such as brass or bronze are susceptible to SCC when exposed to ammonia.

Elements known to promote SCC in gold jewelry alloys can be found in the halogen group. These corrosive elements include iodine, chlorine, fluorine and bromine. For a karat gold jewelry piece to suffer SCC, two factors must be present and act simultaneously - residual stress (prong tension, etc...) and exposure to a corrosive environment. The jewelry will not fail due to SCC if either one of the components is absent.

Residual stresses remain in a metal after it is deformed. Operations such as bending, stretching and compression are known sources of residual stresses. Increasing the level of residual stress also increases the chances of failure when exposed to a corrosive environment. Residual stress can be reduced or eliminated by either annealing or by using a low-temperature stress-relieving heat treatment cycle. The low-temperature treatment would be preferred when stones or solder joints are involved and would require holding the jewelry at 650°F for one hour.

The detrimental effect of notching has been studied at great length in applications to structural assemblies. Notches and cuts which come to a sharp angle are undesirable due to the concentration of stress at the notch tip. There are many cases where notching is introduced to cause failure. Examples are scoring of glass and sheet rock and timber cutting.

Care must be taken when notching of a prong for stone setting. A radius helps to distribute stress over a larger area and minimizes stress concentration. Avoid manipulation of notched prong tips to prevent micro tears and rapid buildup of residual stress. Also avoid compressing notched prong tips too tightly against stones as it will increase the residual stress at the notched area of the prong by acting as a wedge.

Consideration should also be given to alloy selection to reduce chances of failure due to SCC. Platinum and gold alloys of 18kt or higher are much more resistant to SCC than 14kt and lower karat gold alloys. In a similar fashion, 14kt palladium white gold alloys are extremely resistant to SCC, whereas 14kt nickel white alloys are susceptible to SCC.

Now that we know that the failure of a piece of jewelry due to SCC can only occur with certain alloys that have been exposed to a corrosive environment and only if residual stress exists, we can address the SCC phenomena by controlling many of the variables that cause SCC. Educating the end user about exposure of jewelry to corrosive environments is important but impossible to monitor. As a jeweler, you can minimize the risk of failure by SCC with proper alloy selection and stone-setting techniques to reduce residual stress.

We hope that the above discussion has removed the mystique from this type of “mysterious” failure and provided you with the tools and knowledge to recognize and prevent prong failures incorrectly attributed to “bad metal” or “bad casting.”

THE EUROPEAN DIRECTIVE FOR NICKEL IN JEWELRY

THE EUROPEAN APPROACH

Following unilateral action by some European Union (EU) countries, the EU decided to enact a Directive to prevent sensitized persons from suffering allergic reaction when wearing jewelry and other items that come into contact with the skin.

The important thing to note here is that the law applies to all jewelry (including costume/fashion jewelry) and other items that come into contact with the skin. Thus watches and watch straps are also embraced, as are metallic items on clothes—zips, rivets on jeans, catches on underwear, and others. It is not strictly for white gold jewelry.

WHAT DOES THE DIRECTIVE COVER?

The directive requires:

- 1) Ear Posts (including posts inserted into other parts of the body) inserted into the wound during the healing period following the piercing: Prohibits the use of nickel in posts inserted into the wound during the healing period, if the concentration of nickel in the post is 0.05% wt. nickel or more. The UK guidelines suggest that other contacting surfaces of earrings are included here.
- 2) Parts of jewelry and other items coming into direct and prolonged contact with the skin:
  - a. Release of nickel above 0.5 micrograms per square centimeter per week is prohibited.
  - b. This release rate not to be exceeded for a period of at least two years of normal use of product.

Note: Nickel release is defined in terms of a Standard Test for nickel release, which is immersion in a salt solution to simulate human sweat. Interpretation of test results is also subject to some “adjustment” factor.

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

- 1) For ear posts inserted into a healing wound, the law is straightforward to interpret. Effectively, NO NICKEL, whether the ear post is made from gold, steel, titanium or any other metal! This applies to items that may be coated with a non-nickel coating.
- 2) For normal use, any jewelry or other items in direct and prolonged contact with the skin must comply with the nickel-release requirement. This affects mainly gold and costume/fashion jewelry (gold-plated often has a nickel plate underlayer.)

We are discussing mainly white golds but not exclusively so! Some yellow golds may contain some small nickel alloying additions! If mixed scrap is recycled in jewelry projection, then some nickel white gold can contaminate a yellow gold melt.

White golds: there are essentially two types of white golds—nickel whites and the palladium whites, but beware—some low palladium whites may contain nickel alloying additions, too. Many white golds are rhodium-plated to give a good white appearance. If so, the items still needs to comply with nickel-release requirements over a two-year period. Rhodium-plating will wear through!

It is possible to use (small) nickel alloying additions in golds and meet the nickel-release requirements, but one cannot define a threshold nickel content below which all alloys will met the requirement. Nickel-release rate depends on many factors, metallurgical and otherwise. One has to test and determine release rate on individual completed jewelry items to be certain they comply!

In practice, many retailers and producers are opting for complete safety by using only “nickel-free” alloys. For white golds, this means switching to the more expensive palladium whites (High-palladium alloys are usually a good white color, and do not need rhodium-plating.)

WHO IS AFFECTED BY THE DIRECTIVE?

Clearly, all manufacturers, importers, wholesalers and retailers within EU countries must comply for all jewelry sold within the EU.

Reports have been received of alloys, claiming to be nickel-free, that have been analyzed and found to contain significant amounts of nickel. Ensure your alloy supplier certifies that his alloys are nickel-free and meet the requirements. For countries outside of the EU: For example, producers in India, the Middle and Far East, who are exporting into EU countries, must comply with those products that they export into the EU.

TESTING FOR NICKEL RELEASE

There are EU Standards for test procedures for measuring nickel release. Some laboratories in Europe, such as the Birmingham and Sheffield Assay Offices in the UK, offer a commercial testing service. Birmingham also offers an accredited quality system for due diligence in meeting these laws. (Remember, if a product fails a test, the penalties can be severe, so producers need to prove that they have good preventative procedures in place to avoid such penalties.)

WHAT IS WHITE GOLD?

New Guidelines to define Color of White Gold announced by MJSA and World Gold Council!

The White Gold Task Force, an initiative of MJSA and the World Gold Council, set guidelines to define the color of White Gold. These are voluntary USA Industry Guidelines that were widely adopted internationally (and which may lead to an ISO standard).

The lack of an industry-accepted definition of white as applied to white gold has been a problem in the industry where rhodium plating of white gold has become common, thus hiding the real color of the white gold from the consumer at the time of purchase. Rhodium plating of white gold is legal in most countries. For good technical and economic reasons, the term 'white' has been used elastically to encompass a wide range of color, and this has led to consumer dissatisfaction.

The technical issues surrounding white gold were discussed at a Round Table meeting at EXPO NY in 2003 resulting in a consensus for action by U.S. industry participants.

The MJSA and World Gold Council set up the White Gold Task Force to define white as a color in white golds. A user-friendly procedure to determine the degree of whiteness of a particular piece of white gold jewelry has been the issue.

Color, of course, can be measured quantitatively in a reproducible way. The conditions of measurement, especially the incidental lighting, are important. Generally a 'Northern Daylight' illumination is preferred. The degree of whiteness of a white gold can be described in terms of a numerical parameter called the ASTM Yellowness Index: 1925 and is calculated from the basic tri-stimulus values, X, Y & Z, measured with a color spectrophotometer. The lower the value, the whiter is the gold. For more information on this parameter, see the scientific article by Manchandra and Henderson in Gold Bulletin, volume 38 (2) June 2005 on the website, [www.goldbulletin.org]

THE GUIDELINES: [1] DEFINITION OF WHITE GOLD

White gold has been defined as having a Yellowness Index value of 32.0 or less. This is additionally limited in terms of CIE Lab co-ordinates as having an L value of at least 75, and an a* value between +3.0 and -3.5

MEASUREMENT CONDITIONS ARE:

Illuminant C (D65 is a close approximation), observer angle 2°, specular and ultraviolet components included. Samples polished to 6 micron finish. Such measurements should be carried out in a light box with the correct lamp or at least under a lamp with a D65 illuminant. These are available through the MJSA or directly through Gretag MacBeth.

THE GUIDELINES: [2] THE GRADES OF WHITE GOLD

Within the definition of the color of white gold, it is proposed that 3 grades of white gold are defined:

- GRADE 1 (Premium white grade) – these alloys have a good white color and do not need rhodium plating.
- GRADE 2 (Standard grade) – reasonable white color; rhodium plating is optional for these alloys
- GRADE 3 (Off-white color) – such alloys need to be rhodium plated

Any alloys falling outside of these three grades are classed as non-white. In terms of the Yellowness Index, these grades can be defined as follows, Table 2 Grades of white in white golds:

Grade	Yellowness Index value
Grade 1 (Premium)	< 19.0
Grade 2 (Standard)	19.0 – 24.5
Grade 3 (Off-white)	24.5 – 32.0
Non white	>32.0

APPLICATION OF THE GUIDELINES: THE WHITENESS INDEX

For many retailers and manufacturers, quantitative measurement of white golds for whiteness, using a color spectrophotometer instrument is not practical or economical. This problem has been overcome by the development of The Whiteness Index, a color chart, by the Munsell laboratories of Gretag-McBeth Inc. This color chart comprises seven metal foil based samples spanning the range of Yellowness Index values covered by the three grades within the overall definition. Using the correct lighting conditions, the Whiteness Index enables a speedy and easy comparison of the whiteness of a piece of white gold against the samples, thus facilitating an estimate of which grade it is and its Yellowness Index value.

APPLICATION OF THE GUIDELINES: IMPLICATIONS FOR THE TRADE

1. It is envisaged that jewelry retailers and manufacturers will increasingly specify the grade of white when placing orders with their suppliers. At the top end of the market, there will be a preference to specify Grade 1 or possibly Grade 2 alloys in the appropriate karatage. At the lower, mass end of the market, where price is important, many will prefer to specify the off-white Grade 3 and to rhodium plate the jewelry. It is notable that many karat gold alloy suppliers are already defining their range of white golds in terms of the three grades (and the grade selected will be reflected in the price; the Grade 1 alloys will include high palladium alloys and so tend to be more expensive).
2. It should be noted that the Grades of white gold are based solely on color (whiteness) and not on alloy composition. Thus, any of the grades can include nickel-containing alloys that may not comply with the European Directive on nickel.
3. In the case of customer complaints concerning the underlying poor color of white golds, when the rhodium plating wears through, it should be easy, using the Whiteness Index, to establish if the jewelry alloy complies with the industry definition of white gold or lies outside. If outside of the definition, the retailer is vulnerable in cases of litigation. A good reason to specify the Grade when ordering jewelry from their supplier!
4. It is not envisaged that the grade of white gold used in a piece of jewelry will be disclosed to the customer. The grades are intended solely for use within the trade. However, it is an option for retailers (and manufacturers) to disclose to their customers whether the white gold jewelry is rhodium plated. This is a commercial decision! However, there is a body of opinion that failure to disclose rhodium plating could be in breach of national trade laws in many countries where there is a requirement on descriptions of products to be full and accurate.

WHAT IS WHITE GOLD?

All color ratings presented below are based on the YI D1925 (yellowness index) as specified by the World Gold Council/MJSA White Gold Task Force guidelines for grading the color of white gold alloys. The rating system divides white gold alloys into three categories using the alloy's YI or yellowness index.

- YID < 19            Grade 1 – Premium White Color – Rhodium-Plating not required
- YID 19-24.5      Grade 2 – Moderate White Color – Rhodium-Plating optional
- YID 24.5-32      Grade 3 – Off-White Color – Rhodium-Plating required
- YID > 32            Not considered to be a white gold alloy.

HOW TO PREVENT SILVER FROM TARNISHING

Sterling, at over 92% silver, is quite pure. Perhaps this metal's most remarkable attribute is the way it ages. Silver patinas so beautifully that designers often exaggerate that quality, incorporating recesses protected from the natural polishing of everyday wear and even pre-oxidizing the surface.

TARNISHING OF STERLING SILVER JEWELRY

Sterling silver is a copper-silver alloy and is somewhat softer than most gold alloys. Therefore, it is more likely to be abraded to black dust by movement between the jewelry and the skin or clothing. Sterling silver jewelry has a pronounced tendency to tarnish. The tarnish may turn the jewelry black and may be rubbed off on the skin or clothing. A few people, especially with moist skin, may find that the sterling silver stains their skin green due to the copper component of the silver alloy. When this occurs they should polish their jewelry frequently and use an absorbent, non-abrasive powder on moist skin areas that are exposed to the jewelry.

OTHER PROBLEMS WITH STERLING SILVER AND SOLUTIONS

Soaps, detergent, wax, polish and cosmetic creams may build up under a ring causing a type of dermatitis. To prevent this, they should remove all rings before using soap or detergent, and clean the rings frequently. Silver jewelry should be removed before working with photographic chemicals.

WHY USE PLATINUM-COBALT ALLOY

Change is never easy. You invest a lot of time and energy learning how to do something, and then there is a change that means you have to learn a new way of doing it.

Some of you have commented about our change from a Platinum-Iridium casting alloy to a Platinum-Cobalt alloy, because it means you've had to learn a new set of procedures in working with the metal. However, if you look at the changes you have to make in your techniques, it is less of a transition than the move from gold alloys to platinum. And, when you factor in the benefits that this Platinum-Cobalt alloy offers, you come out way ahead in learning this new set of skills.

For example, this Pt-Co alloy was developed more than 20 years ago and has been used extensively in Europe and Japan for jewelry. It's not new, and it was developed specifically to perform better in jewelry casting than either Platinum-Iridium (Pt-Ir) or Platinum-Ruthenium (Pt-Ru).

If you look at a cross-section of cast pieces, you will see that the Pt-Ir and Pt-Ru always show more porosity than the Pt-Co alloy. That means you get the benefit of a denser, more solid casting without the problems that porosity can create.

The as-cast surface of Pt-Ir and Pt-Ru is always much rougher. Because of the smoother surface, Pt-Co requires less finishing, resulting in a higher finished weight and less metal loss both of which keep the manufacturing costs down.

And since Pt-Co has better fluidity than Pt-Ir or Pt-Ru, you get a better fill rate and a much higher yield in the casting process, once again enhancing the manufacturing process and reducing manufacturing costs.

Working with Pt-Co at the bench requires only a couple of changes from your Pt-Ir techniques:

- Don't use boric as a firecoat during soldering. However, you can use it to clean up any surface discoloration that occurs during the soldering process. Be aware that the heating temperature for this clean up is 1200°F, not Celsius.
- Since the cobalt is very slightly magnetic, you need to be careful about contamination with bench scrap. However, since all platinum alloys are very easily contaminated, you shouldn't have a problem if you follow good housekeeping procedures.
- Although you can't weld Pt-Co alloy to Pt-Ir alloy, you can easily weld it to itself. We offer both sizing stocks and solders for Pt-Co applications.

Probably one of the most useful things about the alloy is that it can ethically and legally be marked as "Platinum" without having to list the alloy component, since it is 950 pure. That's not the case with Pt-Ir, which is only 900 pure Platinum.

Tip: Test for Pt/Cobalt Alloy
Touch a magnet to the ring. If there is a magnet pull then it is likely that the ring is made from Pt/Cobalt Alloy.

IMPORTANT PLATINUM INFORMATION

Stuller cast platinum products are made from a 95/5 Platinum-Cobalt alloy. Because this alloy behaves differently than 90/10 Platinum-Iridium alloy, we wanted to give you the following tips on using the metal.

Since cobalt is ferromagnetic, like iron, this alloy is slightly magnetic. You should avoid contamination of the piece with magnetized bench scrap.

The melting temperature of this alloy is 1765°C (3209°F), compared to 1800°C (3272°F) for 90/10 Platinum-Iridium alloy. This difference makes fusing the two alloys practically impossible.

When sizing a shank made from this alloy, use a 1700°C solder. When joining this alloy to gold, use a cadmium-free karat gold solder. Cadmium will migrate into the grain boundaries of this alloy, causing brittleness.

This alloy will tarnish (oxidize) during soldering. Do not coat the piece with boric acid prior to soldering, as this will lead to brittleness and breaking along the joint. After soldering, coat with boric, heat to approximately 1200°F (low red color), and pickle to remove the oxides.

NATIONAL GOLD AND SILVER MARKING ACT

On October 1, 1981, revised Section 295 of Volume 15 of the United States Code, the law governing requirements for gold and silver marking, which is commonly known as the National Gold and Silver Marking Act, went into effect. Originally enacted in 1906, this law never required one to indicate quality. However, if quality was affirmatively disclosed, it had to be accurate within 1/2 karat (without solder) or 1 karat (with solder, article assayed in its entirety) from the disclosed mark. Criminal sanctions could be imposed for violations.

In 1961, this Act was amended to require the additional disclosures of the name or registered trademark of the firm responsible for the quality guaranty. This law was amended in 1970 to provide for civil penalties via private legal action.

Now, the fineness tolerances for gold articles are considerably tightened. Signed into law in 1976 and effective on October 1, 1981, Section 295 was revised to further regulate precious metal standards by more stringently specifying the proportion of gold with and without solder, making gold as good as gold.

Since October 1 has passed, the following stricter requirements apply. In the case of gold or any of its alloys imported, exported, or transported through interstate commerce, actual fineness shall not be less by more than 3/1000ths parts (without solder) or 7/1000ths parts (with solder taken into account).

While the law requires that gold and silver jewelry carrying a quality mark also carry the registered trademark of the person or organization responsible for the guarantee of quality, there is no United States law requiring that gold or silver be quality marked in the first place. If a quality mark appears, so must the trademark. Whereas a quality mark alone is meaningless, the appearance of a trademark serves to assign the responsibility for fraudulent quality marks.

A quality mark represents the stated standard. The presence of the manufacturer's trademark is an important assurance that the ratio of gold to alloy as represented by a stamp on the article is accurate, thus making it conform with the law. On a pragmatic level, such a measure is valuable primarily to distributors and retailers who can hold the manufacturer responsible in case a quality mark is found to be an exaggeration, thereby relieving themselves from responsibility in the chain of distribution. If, however, a quality mark is unaccompanied by a manufacturer's trademark, it is the distributor and/or retailer who will be held accountable for having passed fraudulently marked goods onto the public.

A trademark is an assurance of quality. It is a permanent record of origin and an assumption of responsibility. It is clearly for the benefit of both distributors and retailers to make certain that each and every gold or silver item purchased is inscribed with a quality mark and is inscribed with a trademark, in accordance with the law. Important: The application of this mark is required to be identical to the means used in applying the quality mark, and must be at least as large as and positioned as close as possible to the quality mark.

Requiring that manufacturers remain wholly accountable for the quality of their gold and silver items, this law offers distributors and retailers a degree of assurance in the value of their products. Since tolerance standards are much higher than before, there may be a particular urge on the part of some members of our industry to bypass the requirements of signature presence on their gold and silver goods. Anyone who wants to keep his own standards high should remain alert, demanding that others do not try to side-step the law.

The Federal Trade Commission's Guides for the Jewelry Industry contain additional prohibitions of which industry members should be aware. JVC members have copies of the National Gold and Silver Marking Act, as well as our recommendations for revision of the current Guides, which we submitted on January 8, 1981. Reference to these Guides and the Stamping Act is advised for full understanding of the law.
